Rattan furniture - Overview of the European Union

Product description

|            |   |
|------------|---|
| HS 9401.50 | Seats of cane, osier, bamboo or similar materials.                          |
| HS 9403.80 | Furniture of materials, including cane, osier, bamboo or similar materials. |

The term seats includes armchairs, chairs and sofas (ie all seating furniture) while the term 'furniture' refers to chests of drawers, sideboards, wardrobes and tables.

Production

Official statistics on production of rattan furniture within the European Union (EU) are not available. According to a major trade source, annual production is valued on average at ECU 300 million, but is declining constantly, mainly due to increasing labour costs and restrictions imposed on exports of raw and semi-finished cane and rattan by the major producing countries. Within the European Union, Italy is by far the largest producer, followed by France, Spain and Germany.

(a) Data for extra-EU trade only (see footnote 1).

Note: Totals may not add up due to rounding of data.

During the period 1989-1993, imports of rattan seats and furniture from non-EU suppliers showed an overall increase, with imports of seats showing a growth of 69% over the period, and 37% for furniture. Annex III provides a breakdown of EU imports by member country and by product group; as well as import data by country of origin for the EU as a whole.

(1) The method of data collection on trade flows between members of the EU was modified with the creation of the single European market (abolition of customs formalities between Member States) which came into effect on 1 January 1993; this has also delayed the compilation of intra-EU trade data for 1993. For purposes of comparison, therefore, data presented in annex III has been divided into intra-EU and extra-EU trade; commentary in this market brief will focus on imports from non-EU sources.

The percentages below are based on imports from non-EU suppliers.

Major importing countries and their share of total extra-EU imports, 1993

| Rattan seats | Rattan furniture |
|---------------------|-------------------------|
| Germany             | 29.7%                   |
| Netherlands         | 26.8%                   |
| United Kingdom      | 13.0%                   |
| France              | 10.2%                   |
| Germany             | 21.5%                   |
| France              | 19.3%                   |
| United Kingdom      | 18.4%                   |
| Netherlands         | 11.8%                   |

Most dynamic importers - percentage change 1993/1989 (% share of total extra-EU imports)

| Rattan seats | Rattan furniture |
|---------------------|-------------------------|
| Portugal            | 418% (0.26%)            |
| Greece              | 378% (0.67%)            |
| Netherlands         | 324% (26.8%)            |
| Germany             | 213% (29.7%)            |
| Portugal            | 504% (0.43%)            |
| Netherlands         | 315% (11.8%)            |
| Italy               | 202% (7.96%)            |

As shown in annex III, Italy ranks first among the suppliers of rattan furniture to the European Union, followed by Indonesia which is also the leading supplier of rattan seats. While imports from Indonesia have increased considerably over recent years, those from other developing countries have grown only moderately or decreased.

Market characteristics

Indonesia is the world's largest producer of rattan cane (followed by Malaysia and Vietnam) and exporter of rattan products. In 1986, Indonesia restricted the export of raw and semi-processed rattan cane in an attempt to strengthen domestic industry. This had serious consequences for the production of rattan furniture industry in Europe, prompting manufacturers to enter into joint-venture arrangements with the producing countries. The European Union imports both semi-finished and finished products. The major suppliers of rattan seats are Indonesia, the Philippines and China whereas the major supplier of rattan furniture is Italy followed by Indonesia.

The impact of the economic recession on consumer patterns led to a shift in consumer demand for high cost wooden furniture to cheaper products. To a certain extent, this has favored sales of rattan furniture. There are various uses of cane and rattan furniture; in Germany they are popular as bedroom, occasional living and dining room furniture, in France they are mainly used for the garden and for the country home, while in Italy they are largely used for city apartments and second residences.

Italy's style and design greatly influence the EU market, especially in the upper market segment. Generally speaking, rattan furniture is widely used as garden furniture, demand is higher in southern European countries where climatic conditions are favorable and allow for more outdoor living. In recent years, colored rattan cane furniture has become very fashionable. It is interesting to note that a new niche has developed for garden furniture of rattan mixed with metal. The main competitor of rattan garden furniture is plastic (PVC) furniture, but the former has the advantage of fitting in with the growing consumer preference for natural products.

Pricing

The following breakdown of Asian export prices obtained from the ASEAN Timber Technology Center were calculated on the basis of ex-factory prices shows to what extent direct sales to retailers can reduce import costs and final retail prices. Certain products like rattan garden furniture which suffer from competition with cheap plastic and metal furniture, will gain ground in the market if offered direct to importers/retailers.

Market access

EU member states apply the Common External Tariff (CET) rate which is 5.6% (base rate of duty) of the CIF value for imports of seats and rattan furniture. Under the Generalized System of Preferences (GSP), imports from developing countries are exempt from customs duties, except for Indonesia. Under Schedule LXXX of the European Communities, imports would be duty-free for countries with MFN status on the condition that the export restrictions imposed by Indonesia are eliminated.

Value added tax rates vary within the EU, from 15% in Germany to 25% in Denmark. Uniform rates are expected to come into force in the near future.

Quality standards are set by the European Union in cooperation with Comité Européen de Normalization (European Committee for Standardization - CEN).

Distribution channels

Seats and furniture of rattan are usually handled by specialized importers of furniture or imported direct by retailers or central buying groups.

The main retail outlets for rattan seats and furniture are general furniture stores, rattan furniture specialists, garden centers and department stores. The large specialized furniture distribution chains have steadily increased their share of the market in recent years. (See annex II for a list of importers and major retail buyers.)

Commercial practices

Orders are normally based on catalogues. Specialized international furniture trade fairs which take place in the EU throughout the year, can prove very useful for establishing trade contacts and for placing orders (see annex I for a list of useful addresses and specialized trade fairs).

Payment is generally by letter of credit and cash against documents. Retail sales are seasonal especially for garden furniture, occurring mostly during May and July.

Packaging and transport

Rattan furniture is wrapped in corrugated paper or packed in damp-proof wrapping. Products from developing countries are shipped in containers and those from European countries are delivered mainly by road.

Market prospects

The demand for rattan furniture and seats is increasing steadily and the market of rattan furniture in the EU should not be underestimated, in particular for low-priced, middle and low quality products. Some markets offer more opportunities than others, especially Italy, France and Germany.

Although Indonesia has gained the lions share of the market, other developing countries can enter the EU market on the condition that quality and design be improved.
